I don't agree with the "Don't" about sending one email to several people. There was a thread recently on one of the discussion groups about this and opinions were expressed on both side of this " so I wouldn't present it as a hard and fast rule unless it only applies to the case where a newbie sends one email to every one of their matches at once.

Unlike a game of make-believe, D&D gives structure to the stories, a way of determining the consequences of the adventurers' action. Players roll dice to resolve whether their attacks hit or miss or whether their adventurers can scale a cliff, roll away from the strike of a magical lightning bolt, or pull off some other dangerous task.

One of the things I love about the genealogical community is its generosity. Whether it's time spent in indexing records, volunteering assistance in Facebook groups, or helping novice researchers at a Family History Center, many family historians are eager to share what they've learned and contribute their expertise in ways that benefit the community as a whole.
