The new dimension to be emphasized is the emerging technologies for preservation of foods and the need for sound base of information to be developed as inputs for systematic process design. The focus of the work is on process design, and emphasizes the need for quantitative information as inputs to process design.

Food Preservation Process Design - 1st Edition

food preservation process design pdf Food irradiation is the process of exposing food and food packaging to ionizing radiation. Ionizing radiation, such as from gamma rays, x-rays, or electron beams, is energy that can be transmitted without direct contact

Food Preservation Process Design Food Science And Technology

The design of preservation processes has become quantitative as more information about the response of microbial populations to elevated temperatures has become available. In addition, quantitative process design has been enhanced through application of thermal energy transfer models and availability of reliable physical properties data for foods.
